Convivial Tables

Convivial Good Times

Welcome to our Convivial Christmas Dinner Celebration on a journey to discover the diversity of food, wine and produce, sharing tables, discovering the best of our region of Gippsland.

"Convivium" was a Latin word, originating in "living together", for the common room where everyone ate and talked at the end of the day. Eventually it became the term for a festive gathering. Later still, it gave rise in English to "convivial" – fond of feasting, drinking and good company; sociable; merry, festive. We join together to celebrate the excellence of food and wine in our region, and to encourage the availability of diverse, fresh local ingredients

There's a lot to be said about Australian food and its future. Our migrant communities know that food is culture, history, heritage and identity. It's more than just nostalgia for another way of life and an era when people had 'time' to hunt, gather, grow and cook their evening meal. Eating is about family and sharing, breaking bread and forming bonds. It's about cultural tolerance, connections with people, place and soil.

The history of food is one of evolution and fusion, cross-fertilisation, commercial interests, greed for profits as well as flavour. Some things get lost and others are created. But food is about who we are and what we connect to. And keeping those links is vitally important...sharing the experience of our Convivial Dinners, brings those links to life,

This is a perfect time to celebrate the festive season, make this your end of year work break up with your staff and work mates alike

This will also be a great time to say Merry Christmas with friends and family before the crazy period sets in, some of us may go away for the holiday period, lets get together now and share in the spirit of Christmas
